Bright sparks will train at new centre

By BILL JACOBS

Work has started on a new £2million training centre to produce the next generation of electricity supply workers.

The Blackburn complex will recruit apprentices across East Lancashire and reskill existing staff.

The state-of-the-art academy in Whitebirk, due to open by September, replaces an existing centre near Wigan.

It will create local job opportunities and train the next generation of engineers to help maintain the North West's electricity supply.

Electricity North West, which owns and maintains the region's electricity network, aims to train more than 200 apprentices and graduates looking to start a career in the energy industry and reskill existing members of staff.

Chief executive Steve Johnson said: "I am delighted that work has started on our new training facility. This is a fantastic development and it will allow us to grow our already successful apprenticeship scheme, with space for even more apprentices, A-level entrants and graduates joining our programmes.

"This growth is vital to ensure the North West's network and our people are fully equipped to meet the challenges of the future."

The new training facility will create 150 new roles over the next few years.

Hyndburn MP Graham Jones said: "This is fantastic news for East Lancashire and I'm extremely impressed with the training available.

"I'm delighted that Electricity North West will help provide great employment opportunities for local residents and I believe the academy will make a real difference in tough times."

Electricity North West funds specific electrical qualifications as well as vocational on-the-job training.

The new academy, which will utilise vacant land at the depot, will incorporate five workshops, classrooms, office space as well as associated amenity spaces, including outdoor training faclities.

The design of the building will complement Electricity North West's strategy for a sustainable future by minimising energy demands of the building, and as a result maintaining a low carbon footprint.

Blackburn with Darwen regeneration boss Dave Harling said the scheme was excellent news East Lancashire.

Knockout pints help boxing club

A boxing club is hoping a beer named in its honour will pack enough of a punch to raise vital funds.

Clayton Amatuer Boxing Club, known as Clayton ABC, has had The Boxer specially created for it by micro-brewery Bank Top Brewery

And money raised from the sale of the medium-coloured bitter at the nearby Old England Forever pub will help the club pay for renovations, expected to cost thous- ands.

Head coach John Brindle was discussing the problem with the landlord of the Church Street pub when the idea was born.

Landlord John Hodgkiss came up with the plan, and approached the brewery to see if they would help make the scheme a reality.

Mr Hodgkiss said the 3.8per cent bitter had been a knockout success. He said: "It's gone down very well with people and is selling because people like to try new things. When the club were saying they needed to raise money I saw this might be a good way to go about it.

"When I approached Bank Top Brewery, they said no problem. I knew they would come up with something good because they make good beers.

"We're going to continue with Boxer beer, but we will change its flavour from time to time to keep people interested."

HOPPY TO HELP: Old England Forever manager Martin Hodgkiss with a pint of The Boxer

Not only is the Old England Forever pub assisting the newly-ABA affiliated club, but the Royal Oak, in Sparth Road, is also raffling meat hampers weekly to assist with the gym improvements.

Mr Brindle said: "It's fantastic to see the community pulling together to help renovate the club, and our members are doing their bit by carrying out a number of fund-raising events.

"Literally everything needs doing at the club – plastering, flooring, the lot, so it will cost a great deal of money. The beer is a hit and I'm not surprised as it's really tasty."

Boxing club members also plan to hold fundraisers, such as bag packing in Asda, in the future.

The club is also hoping to secure sponsorship for the next fight night, at the New Era, on March 22.

Tickets are on sale at £12 each, and can be purchased directly from Clayton ABC.

Cutting edge in skin cancer fight

Trainee hairdressers are being shown how to spot the early signs of skin cancer in a scheme which has won national recognition for an East Lancashire nurse.

Billy Hefferon, 45, has been training young hairdressers and beauty therapists about the vital role they can play in fighting dangerous cancers such as melanoma.

The specialist nurse, who works at the Royal Blackburn and Burnley General hospitals, said the students would be in a unique position to spot skin cancer lesions on clients, and could help get problems diagnosed more quickly.

The project was highly commended for an NHS Innovation Challenge Prize and Billy travelled to London for a glitzy ceremony last week, which was also attended by Health Secretary Jeremy Hunt.

Mr Hefferon said: "Hairdressers and beauty therapists have anecdotally spotted things for years but we wanted to formalise it and help them understand what they might see.

"They're not expected to diagnose things but can point people in the right direction."

He has already held sessions at Preston colleges and now hopes to roll the scheme out in the Blackburn and Burnley areas.

He said: "It was very unusual but quite interesting. I was surprised how good their training is and how much knowledge they have."

Currently there is no general screening programme in the UK for skin cancer, despite it being one of the most common types.

Many cases go undetected for years, meaning treatment is delayed and less effective.

HIGHLY COMMENDED: Specialist nurse Billy Hefferon earned national recognition for training students to recognise early symptoms of cancer in their clients

Hot news about keeping warm

ADVERTISEMENT FEATURE

No chimney? No problem.

For Chorley Fire Centre specialises in twin wall flue systems, which means you can install a solid fuel stove in most places inside your home.

The business can also fit them in most conservatories, which can be cold in winter, even if it has a polycarbonate roof, to ensure it is warm and cosy all year round.

If your house does have a chimney but you can't use it, because it leaks, Chorley Fire Centre, which is based in a new showroom, in Steeley Lane, can solve the problem by installing a class one flexible liner to seal it.

Among the products available are multifuel and woodburning stoves, such as the Defra approved, Firefox 5kw / 8kw / 12kw and Vega 100 /200/300.

Customers can choose from evergreen stoves, the Dunsley Highlander and Solo 5kw / 7kw /8kw, which are also Defra approved, town and country stoves and Mulbury enamelled stoves.

The centre is also a stockist of Carron stoves, most of which are also Defra approved for burning in smoke controlled areas and come in a choice of enamelled colours.

It offers a choice of fireplaces and customers can browse a range on display, while it also has open fires, fire backs, log baskets, companion sets, fire screens, spark guards, nursery fire guards, coal hods and both ash hovers and carriers, as well as high temperature paint and most stove cleaning products.

Customers can find most stove accessories.

Scientist or model?

That's the choice Tutu, 13, faces after contest success

A stunning teenager has proved she has brains and beauty after coming third in a national modelling competition.

Tutu Mukelabai has always had a keen interest in fashion and has recently appeared in teenage girls' magazine Bliss.

The 13-year-old from Hyndburn was shortlisted from hundreds of entries for the final six of competition.

Tutu, who studies at Rhyddings Business and Enterprise School, Oswaldtwistle, said: "I was a bit bored during the summer holidays. My mum had bought me a couple of magazine and I saw the modelling competition and entered.

"I didn't know if I would hear anything, but I was selected for the final six. I was really excited when I found out."

Tutu went on a photoshoot in August and the magazine containing her images was published in December.

She said: "When the magazine came out, I went to buy it on the day and I was dancing around when I saw my pictures. My mum is really proud."

During the February half term Tutu and her mum travelled to London to visit a number of modelling agencies which said she needed to be 14 to be an adult model

Tutu, who also plays field hockey, said: "I want to pursue modelling, but I also do my best at school.

"Modelling is something I want to do, but I also want to be a research scientist. I hope the modelling will pay for me to go to university where I would like to study chemistry."

Darwen Vale headteacher Fiona Jack said: "We are very pleased to be nominated for this prestigious award which recognises the new facilities that will enable us to be at the forefront of education for the 21st Century."

The winners will be announced at a ceremony at The Point, Lancashire County Cricket Club, on May 9.

High Sheriff is right on cue!

Lancashire's High Sheriff visited Blackburn's new youth zone ahead of plans to open a Preston version.

The High Sheriff, Jeremy Gorick, was given a special tour by youth zone members of the Jubilee Street centre. During the visit Mr Gorick and visitors from University of Central Lancashire joined in a game of pool with young people at the centre.

Arranged by OnSide North West, which works to establish state-of-the-art youth centres within the region, the visit saw Mr Gorick, Dharma Kovvuri – dean of business at UCLan, and Russell Hogarth, UCLan Honorary Fellow, see the youth zone in action with the aim of replicating Blackburn's model in Preston.

Olly's back and bigger than ever

Since leaving The X Factor as runner-up in 2009, Olly Murs has released three albums and sold almost three million copies. Now he's winning over the critics ahead of his UK tour.

YOU'VE BEEN IN THE US LATELY. HOW'S IT GOING?
Really well, I'm so chuffed. There's another single coming out over there soon, and then the album in April. I'm going to be back there after my UK tour for more promo, different bits and bobs. It'll be an interesting couple of months. The single Troublemaker is smashing it.

WHAT HAVE YOU GOT PLANNED FOR THE TOUR?
It's going to be a step up from the last tour, so bigger everything; stage, arrangements and band. There are plenty of songs now too, so it's picking the right ones.

THERE ARE A FAIR FEW HITS IN YOUR CATALOGUE NOW. IS IT HARD CHOOSING WHAT TO LEAVE OUT?
It is hard, but it's great to be in that position. People come from The X Factor and they might stick around for a year or two, so I'm proud to carry on selling records, to grow a fanbase and be on three albums. It's a massive achievement and it doesn't get highlighted enough.

60 SECONDS WITH ... OLLY MURS

DOES THAT BOTHER YOU?
Of course. You want to be successful from a fan point of view, and you want people to buy your stuff, so from that aspect I couldn't be doing any better. From an industry point of view, press too, there is snobbery that I'm from The X Factor, that I didn't come through the right channels, and they're not into it.

YOU WERE NOMINATED FOR BEST BRITISH MALE AT THE BRITS. THAT'S RECOGNITION.
Yes, but it's an award voted for by the industry, so I knew I wouldn't win. If it was voted for by the fans, then I might have had a chance. Being nominated's a step forward.
